

Glacier Country

First things first. How do you get here? Getting to Montana's Glacier Country is easier than you might think. We have two international airports, in Missoula and the Columbia Falls/Kalispell/Whitefish area, serviced by Alaska/Horizon Air, Allegiant Air, Big Sky, Delta/Sky West, Northwest Airlines, United and US Airways. Direct flights are available from Chicago (3 hours), Denver (2 hours), Las Vegas (2.5 hours), Minneapolis (2.5 hours), Salt Lake City (1.5 hours), Seattle (1 hour), and many more popular hubs (flight times are approximate).

Amtrak and motor coaches are also great ways to travel to Montana's Glacier Country. The train operates daily from Seattle and Portland, and Minneapolis and Chicago, to Browning, Cut Bank, East Glacier, Essex, Libby, West Glacier and Whitefish. For Amtrak reservations, call 800-872-7245. Once you've arrived, you'll find representatives from most major car rental companies – including Avis, Dollar, Enterprise, Hertz and more.

Road tripping to and through Montana's Glacier Country is just as enjoyable. A well-maintained highway system, anchored by Interstate 90 running east and west through Glacier Country, makes driving here easy and scenic, whether you drive an RV or the family wagon. Full-service campgrounds are everywhere, and there's a stunning view around just about every bend in the road. For road travel information, call 406-444-6200 or visit www.mdt.state.mt.us.
